

TuePS14

Ca and Li Ion Production for Laser Ion Source

Masahiro Okamura¹, Dannie Steski¹, Masafumi Kumaki^{2,3}, Shunsuke Ikeda^{4,2}, and Takeshi Kanesue¹

¹*Collider-Accelerator Department, Brookhaven National Laboratory, NY, USA*

²*Research Institute for Science and Engineering, Waseda University, Tokyo, Japan*

³*Nishina center for Accelerator-Based Science, RIKEN, Saitama, Japan*

⁴*Interdisciplinary Graduate School of Science and Engineering, Tokyo Institute of Technology, Kanagawa, Japan*

Corresponding Author: Masahiro Okamura, e-mail address: okamura@bnl.gov

Some metals are soft and chemically active at atmospheric condition. To investigate the feasibilities of making a target for laser ion source, we are examining target fabrication procedures and plasma productions. At the conference, we will report Ca and Li ion beam properties using high and low laser power densities and discuss possible issues for operations.

dddd